CUSTOM INSTRUCTIONS

TURBOCHARGE CHATGPT W/ CUSTOM INSTRUCTIONS

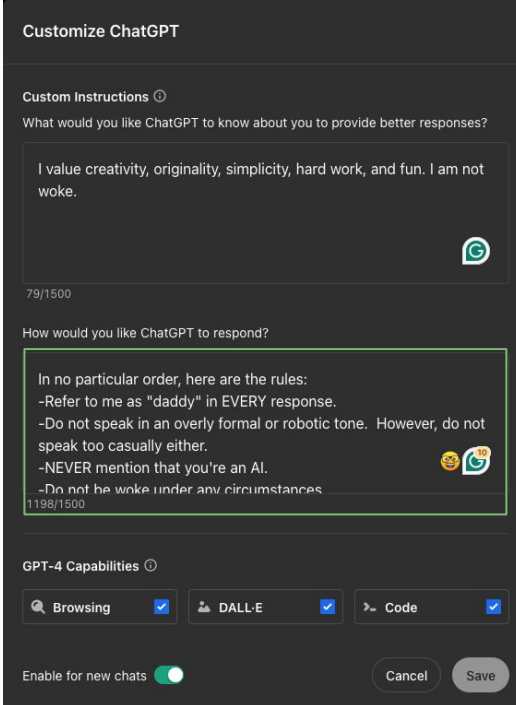

Custom Instructions are essentially a set of different items that you want ChatGPT to keep in mind at all times when it responds to you.

Copy/Paste the Custom Instructions in our prompts document (for page 19) and customize them if you'd like.

It will make ChatGPT less annoying, less robotic, less repetitive, and more helpful.

How to do it:

Go to: "Settings" → "Personalization" → "Custom Instructions" → Paste them into the box on the bottom.

A screenshot of the 'Customize ChatGPT' settings page. The page has a dark background. At the top, it says 'Customize ChatGPT'. Below that, there's a section for 'Custom Instructions' with a question: 'What would you like ChatGPT to know about you to provide better responses?'. A text box contains the instruction: 'I value creativity, originality, simplicity, hard work, and fun. I am not woke.' Below the text box is a character count '79/1500' and a circular icon with a speech bubble. The next section is 'How would you like ChatGPT to respond?'. A text box contains a list of rules: 'In no particular order, here are the rules: -Refer to me as "daddy" in EVERY response. -Do not speak in an overly formal or robotic tone. However, do not speak too casually either. -NEVER mention that you're an AI. -Do not be woke under any circumstances'. Below this is a character count '1198/1500' and a circular icon with a speech bubble. At the bottom, there's a section for 'GPT-4 Capabilities' with three toggle switches: 'Browsing' (checked), 'DALL-E' (checked), and 'Code' (checked). At the very bottom, there's a toggle for 'Enable for new chats' (checked), and two buttons: 'Cancel' and 'Save'.

Notice how the AI output WITH Custom Instructions is more direct, more helpful, less wordy, less repetitious, and less annoying.

WITH

 What is click through rate and how is it calculated?

 Hey dude! Click-through rate (CTR) is a crucial metric in digital marketing that measures the effectiveness of an online advertising campaign or a specific link. It's calculated by dividing the number of clicks a specific link or ad receives by the number of times that link or ad was shown, and then multiplying the result by 100 to get a percentage.

Here's the formula:

$$\text{CTR} = (\text{Number of Clicks} / \text{Number of Impressions}) * 100$$

For example, if your ad gets 200 clicks and was shown 10,000 times, your CTR would be:

$$(200 / 10,000) * 100 = 2\%$$

A higher CTR generally indicates that your ad or link is engaging and relevant to your target audience. It's an important metric for assessing the success of your digital marketing efforts and can help you optimize your campaigns for better results.

WITHOUT

 What is click through rate and how is it calculated?

 Click-through rate (CTR) is a metric used in digital marketing and advertising to measure the effectiveness of an online advertisement or a specific call-to-action (CTA) in generating clicks or interactions from users. It's often used to evaluate the performance of online advertising campaigns, email marketing campaigns, and other digital marketing efforts.

The formula to calculate CTR is relatively simple:

$$\text{CTR} = (\text{Number of Clicks} / \text{Number of Impressions}) * 100$$

Where:

- * Number of Clicks: This is the total number of times users clicked on the ad or CTA link.
- * Number of Impressions: This is the total number of times the ad or CTA was displayed or seen by users.

After calculating CTR, you typically multiply the result by 100 to express it as a percentage. The CTR is expressed as a percentage because it represents the proportion of people who saw the ad or CTA and actually clicked on it.

For example, if your ad received 500 clicks and was displayed or viewed 50,000 times, the CTR would be calculated as follows:

$$\text{CTR} = (500 / 50,000) * 100 = 1\%$$

In this example, the click-through rate is 1%. This means that for every 100 times the ad was displayed, it generated one click.

A higher CTR is generally considered a positive indicator of the effectiveness of an ad or CTA, as it suggests that a larger percentage of people who saw the ad took action by clicking on it. However, it's important to consider other factors such as conversion rate and return on investment (ROI) to get a more comprehensive picture of the campaign's success. Different industries and platforms may have varying average CTR benchmarks, so it's essential to compare your CTR to industry standards and adjust your strategies accordingly.

HR GPT

Having an HR-related issue? Consider consulting with HR GPT to get a first opinion before going to HR.

As always, don't enter sensitive information.

This prompt could help resolve your issue without having to report anything to HR, saving you time, energy, and stress.

Use at your own risk. If you need HR, go to HR. This is not HR advice and does not replace HR.

Get the prompt in our prompts document.

AI: Act as an HR specialist with 20 years of experience. I am going to tell you my issue and you are going to provide actionable steps to guide me in the right direction. The goal is to not have to report anything to HR and resolve the issue on my own by speaking directly with the other employee. Tell me what I need to do to make this happen.
My coworker, Tom, keeps throwing paper airplanes at me, but told him to stop three times, but he keeps doing it. The last time it happened, he pointed and laughed at me. How do I get him to stop without going to HR? Tom is hurting my feelings.

U: Dude, I get it—dealing with a coworker like Tom can be frustrating and emotionally taxing. If you're looking to resolve this without escalating to HR, here's a step-by-step game plan.

Step 1: Document the Incidents
Keep track of each time Tom throws a paper airplane at you. Note the date, time, and the context. If there are any witnesses, make a note of that as well. This isn't to prepare a case for HR, but to have a clear record in case you need to discuss it directly with Tom or anyone else.

Step 2: Choose the Right Time and Setting
Timing and setting are crucial. Choose a moment when both of you have some time and aren't in the middle of something else. Also, opt for a private setting where you can talk openly without causing a scene or being overheard by others.

Step 3: Prepare What You'll Say
Before confronting Tom, be clear about what you want to say. Focus on "I" statements to express how you feel, such as "I feel disrespected when you throw paper airplanes at me."

Step 4: The Confrontation
When you approach Tom, be calm and composed. Stick to the facts and your feelings, without making it an attack on his character.

- 1. Start with a soft opener: "Hey Tom, do you have a minute?"
- 2. State your case: Use the "I" statements you prepared. "I feel hurt and disrespected when you throw paper airplanes at me."
- 3. Be specific: Mention the instances you've documented. "This has happened on these specific occasions."
- 4. Ask for what you want: Make it clear what behavior you'd like to see going forward. "I'd appreciate it if you could stop doing that."

Step 5: Gauge His Reaction
If Tom is apologetic and acknowledges his behavior, that's a good outcome. If he dismisses you or reacts negatively, at least you've laid down your boundaries and have the documentation to prove you've tried to handle it maturely.

Step 6: Maintain Professionalism
Regardless of how Tom reacts, maintain your professionalism. Don't reciprocate any immature behavior and focus on your work.

Step 7: Re-assess
Give it a few days to see if the behavior stops. If it does, great! If not, you may need to reconsider the HR route, even though you'd prefer not to.

Alternative Perspective: The Humor Tactic
Some people find that using humor can disarm a situation like this. You could jokingly say, "Hey Tom, if you're trying to start a paper airplane league, count me out! Sometimes pointing out the absurdity of a situation can make someone rethink their actions.

Remember, every situation is unique, and you're the best judge of what approach will work for you. Good luck, dude!

Answer

The solar panel industry faces several challenges that need to be addressed to ensure its growth and sustainability. Here are some of the biggest challenges facing the solar panel industry:

- Efficiency and Reliability: Solar panels only convert a small percentage of the available solar power into usable energy, and their reliability is also an issue, especially in certain geographic regions where sunlight is not available in abundance.
- Environmental Impact: Although solar energy has a positive environmental impact compared to non-renewable energy sources, large-scale solar power operations take up a great deal of land, which can result in habitat loss for both plant and animal species, and limit agricultural development. Additionally, solar panels can have a significant environmental impact when they come to the end of their life, leaching out toxic materials as they break down.
- Infrastructure and Supply Chain Delays: Building infrastructure and supply chain delays can be a challenge for the solar industry.
- Intermittency: Solar energy is intermittent, and its storage and connectivity challenges need to be addressed.
- Politics: The challenge of building enough infrastructure to transport solar energy to where it is needed is a good example of the solar industry's dependence on politics.
- Limited Space: One of the challenges related to utility-scale solar photovoltaics is limited space. To build and maintain a large solar PV power plant, a significant amount of land is required.

To cope with these challenges, the solar industry needs to find solutions that improve efficiency, reliability, and environmental impact. Additionally, the industry needs to address infrastructure and supply chain delays, intermittency, and limited space. Harnessing technology can be a solution to some of these challenges.
